1 Introduction

The Local Government Association (LGA) commissioned the National Foundation for Educational Research (NFER) to undertake an initial scoping study into safeguarding post-Laming with a view to undertaking further work, if relevant. The purpose of this initial scoping study was to identify research and grey literature, which has been produced since the Laming report (i.e. since March 2009) and to provide a summary of the key findings. It should be noted that the initial scoping study was conducted using a limited number of search terms and was not a systematic scoping study.

Literature was identified through:

- a search of relevant databases (the search strategy for this is provided in Appendix 1)
- a search of local authority websites and relevant national organisation and government websites (the websites searched are listed in Appendix 1)
- existing NFER knowledge of forthcoming publications and knowledge of key contacts within the field of safeguarding.

The key findings

This section provides the key findings from the scoping study. A summary is provided here of the findings from the:

- database searches
- website searches
- items identified by NFER colleagues and other key contacts.

Database searches: summary

Database searches revealed a total of 48 relevant items. Further details of the items can be found in Appendices 2 and 3. In summary:

- SPP, SCIE and Childdata were the sources from which the greatest number of items were identified.
- The majority of items identified were journal articles, although a significant number were also classified as books or reports.
- The majority of the items were based on research or evaluation, although a large number were also practice discussion/guidance pieces.
- Although a number of items were only dated '2009', where specified, items were mainly published over the last three quarters of 2009.

The following table shows the content covered by the items identified by the database searches. A summary of the content of items is provided below the table (more details of the content of items can be found in Appendix 3).

Content of items	Number
Safeguarding generally	12
Social work practice	7
Baby Peter case	6
Child protection practice	6
Child abuse	5
Serious case reviews	4
Laming Report	4
Integrated working generally	2
Local Safeguarding Children Boards (LSCBs)	2
TOTAL	48

- The greatest number of items was focused on safeguarding generally. These covered a range of areas but included good practice guidance, assessing the quality of safeguarding services and interagency training and information sharing, following the Laming recommendations.
- The seven items focused on social work practice included items on the balance of child protection and child welfare work and early identification and intervention.
- All but one of the items specifically focused on the Baby Peter case was about the impact of the case and, in particular, the pressure on services.
- The items about serious case reviews focused on the lessons learnt from serious case reviews, new models and training for reviews.
- Items specifically about the Laming Report either summarised the recommendations or discussed the implications of the report.
- The two items which examined LCSBs focused on the different approaches to LCSBs and their effectiveness.

Website searches: summary

Website searches revealed a total of 41 relevant items. Further details of the items can be found in Appendices 2 and 3. In summary:

- The majority of these were responses from national organisations to the Laming Report or articles and press releases about their responses to the Laming report
- The items also included a small selection of local authority progress reports to committees in response to the Laming Report (i.e. more were available but are not included here).
- The majority of items were published in the first two quarters of 2009.

The following table shows the content covered by the items identified by the website searches. A summary of the content of items is provided below the table (more details of the content of items can be found in Appendix 3).

Content of items	Number
Laming Report	26
Serious case reviews	4
Safeguarding generally	3
Singleton Report	3
Baby Peter case	2
LSCBs	2
Social work practice	1
TOTAL	41

- As noted above, by far the majority of items were focused on responses to the Laming Report, including local authority progress reports.
- The four items focused on serious case reviews included guidance on reviews, local authority evaluation data and a list of executive summaries from individual serious case reviews, from which it was noted that learning points could be drawn.
- The three items focused on safeguarding generally included information about the National Safeguarding Unit and the framework for the new safeguarding inspections.

- The three items focused on the Singleton Report included the report itself and responses to it.

Items identified through NFER and other key contacts

The following items were identified from NFER and other existing contacts.

- Research by CAF/CASS into the effect of the Baby Peter case on Section 31 applications (published January 2010)
- A knowledge review being undertaken by C4EO in the area of safeguarding (due to be published March 2010)
- Research undertaken by Loughborough University into the cost and capacity implications of the Laming Review (due to be published March 2010)
- Research by NFER for the LGA focused on the impact of the case of Baby Peter on section 31 applications and child protection activity more widely (Forthcoming).
- NICE quick reference guide on 'When to Suspect Child Maltreatment' (Published July 2009).

Suggested areas for further research

In light of the findings, the following, or a combination of the following, are suggested as potential areas for further research:

- A literature review examining the key messages from current literature about safeguarding practice post Laming.
- Analysis of local authority responses and progress reports which have been produced in the light of the Laming recommendations in order to inform local authority practice.

Appendix 1 Search strategy

This appendix outlines the search strategy for the databases and the websites.

Database searches

The key words used in the searches of the databases, together with a brief description of each of the databases searched, are outlined below. Throughout, (ft) has been used to denote free-text search terms and * to denote truncation of terms.

Applied Social Sciences Index and Abstracts (ASSIA)

ASSIA is an index of articles from over 600 international English language social science journals.

Recently published reports

The Local Government Education and Children's Services Research Programme is carried out by the NFER. The research projects cover topics and perspectives that are of special interest to local authorities. All the reports are published and disseminated by the NFER, with separate executive summaries. The summaries, and more information about this series, are available free of charge at www.nfer.ac.uk/research-areas/local-government-association/local-government-association_home.cfm.

Supporting local authorities to develop their research capacity

This report sets out the findings from an LGA-funded project that complements Local Authority Research Consortium (LARC) research by examining staff views on the perceived benefits and challenges of being involved in practitioner-led research.

The Sustainable Communities Act: analysis of proposals submitted by councils

This report disseminates findings from an analysis of the proposals submitted by English councils under the Sustainable Communities Act. It aims to provide a snapshot of key patterns and trends emerging from the different types of local authorities in the nine regions and with varying political control.

Provision of mental health services for care leavers: transition to adult services

The Children (Leaving Care) Act 2000 was designed to address the wide variation in local authority provision for care leavers and to promote a more multi-dimensional approach to the process of leaving care. This report examines the extent to which developments since the Act have improved outcomes for young people leaving care.

The Local Government Association (LGA) commissioned the National Foundation for Educational Research (NFER) to undertake an initial scoping study into safeguarding post-Laming, with a view to undertaking further work if relevant. The purpose of the study was to identify research and literature produced since the Laming report was published in March 2009.

Literature was identified through:

- a search of relevant databases
- a search of local authority websites and those of relevant national organisations and government bodies
- existing NFER knowledge of forthcoming publications and key contacts in the field of safeguarding.

This report sets out the search strategies used, a detailed breakdown of the findings and recommendations for future research. It is important reading for local authority managers working in the area of safeguarding, policy-makers and all professionals involved in commissioning and undertaking research on this key area of children's services.
